

When you read a text, the images described should play in your mind like a movie. By “seeing” the characters and events in your mind you will improve your reading comprehension. Practice by visualizing all five of the senses described in literature. Draw or describe what you see in your mind for each of the senses in a scene or event from the text.

